BIMBO AND HORN-E ON THE AB
BREW TOUR BUS FROM FRANKFURT TO BRUSSELS 2014.

For the first time in the history of hashing, registrations to popular HHH events are selling out, leaving many would-be participants out in the cold. This trend started with smaller regional events like InterMekong Hash 2012 in Hanoi, then two years later registrations for IMH 2014 in Chiang Rai sold out in a matter of days.

EuroHash 2015 in Krakow and InterAmerica's Hash 2015 in Portland, two of the largest HHH events in the world next year, sold out a full year ahead of these events. In Portland, the official hash hotel booked all of its rooms within 30 minutes of the time the rooms were available for booking.

This trend may make planning a bit easier for event organizers, but for many hashers it could mean that if you snooze, you lose.

We start this edition of Harrier Magazine in Germany, at the Hannover HHH 30th Anniversary, and then cross the border into Brussels to honor Higgins as a Hash Hero. Hashing in the USA hits the desert in Palm Springs, California with the 28th

Betty Ford Rehab Hash, and surfs over to Hawaii's Kona Coast for some red-hot volcano hashing. The World Peace Through Beer movement is rising like a tidal wave that could engulf the planet.

Adventure hashing? Join seventy-nine Agana hashers stranded on a mountain ridge on a stormy evening. It's getting dark, but the situation seems OK ...until one guy falls into a ravine as darkness closes in.

Make your plans and register early so you won't miss out.

HH Higgins

HASH HERO

By Julie Burgess

Higgins and Yark Sucker were having a beer and unwinding after Brussels 2014, A Beer Odyssey. The following is an interview of Higgins, his thoughts about the event and what's next.

Yark: When did you decide to bid for Interhash?

Higgins: It was one month after Cardiff 2004 Interhash. Cardiff wasn't a sunny holiday destination and no one had heard of it, yet they still came and had fun. So why not Brussels?

Yark: What made you decide to go forward with the event even though it was not an Interhash?

Higgins: We already had 2000 pledge holders and a great core team. What's in a name? In the end we organised a well-received international event with 2500 attendees from 69 countries.

Yark: What were your favourite moments of the Beer Odyssey?

Higgins: On Friday morning at Tour & Taxi, BooBoo of Boo-Coo-Tour presented me with a customised hash lederhosen as an unexpected gift for my 50th birthday. It was royal blue and yellow, the colours of Brussels 2014. There was no need to go back to my hotel for donning my electric blue suit.

I also really enjoyed the VIP Drink on Wednesday before the event.

I had nothing to organise (thanks Yark) and it was fun to catch up with those who helped with Brussels 2014 over the years.

Yark: What was the defining moment of the event?

Higgins: On Friday night, I could finally relax. Everything had been reasonably planned and I was “only” accountable for the whole event but not responsible for any task - time to party!

Yark: Were you satisfied with the result?

Higgins: There were two moments during the weekend that made me feel like the event was a success. On Thursday afternoon toward the end of the Red Dress Walk, the Brussels Chief of Police came along and congratulated me for following the guidelines set down by the police. He was amazed how well behaved the hashers were, especially since they were drinking so much.

The other moment was on Sunday evening when people stopped by on their way out to say “thank you” with a smile on their face. Even the most critical people had little to comment on.

Yark: What did you do to unwind after the event?

Higgins: This is one thing I actually forgot to plan. On the Monday after I went to my local hash for their post-ramble. BMPH3 had been hearing about Brussels 2014 for 8 years. During the circle, to celebrate the end of this project, they drowned me in 100 cans of Primus, pouring it over my head. After that I attended 3 events over 4 weeks: DIVA Bubbly French Nash Hash, German Nash Hash and - for my 50th birthday - Aarhus VIP H3 Festival weekend. At Aarhus, part of the goodie bag was a pillow with my face printed on one side. The organiser thought it was humorous as now everybody could sleep with Higgins.

Yark: So, did you get lucky during Brussels 2014?

Higgins: No Comment.

Yark: While planning the event, were you worried at any point?

Higgins: It is difficult to organise an event of this magnitude outside of Asia. You need to find committee members who have the rare combination of skills, enthusiasm, time and commitment for volunteering work (nobody got paid). In my professional life I was mostly a Project Manager. Before this one, the longest project I had ever managed lasted 9 months, while Brussels 2014 project lasted 8 years including bid/promotion. Let's just say there were some understandable moments of doubt, probably proving I'm not 100% insane. The project timeline worked fine until August 2013. Then some time contingency got used during Q4 2013 (blocked coronary arteries) and the rest – more worryingly - during Q1 2014 (former pacemaker battery too low) so Q2 2014 was a bit of a nightmare for me. However, Higgins version 3.0 is fully operational and chugging along.

Yark: What was the biggest challenge with the organisation?

Higgins: Creating a sense of urgency regarding the trails. Very early on (2010) we had a shortlist of 40 potential run sites previously used by BMPH3 but it took ages to convince local hashers to check them all for assessing current fit for 200 hashers. Eventually we had practice runs and selected 25 sites for handing over to the visiting kennels through a local contact. The Belgian way of doing things sometimes involve discussing plans with suppliers over long lunches, agreement being concluded by a handshake. So believe it or not but we never received a written offer from Haacht brewery! Never mind, we got the discount promised.

Yark: What was your best move for the project?

Higgins: Negotiating and securing hotel deals 2 years in advance. Tomorrowland, the world's largest dance music festival, eventually brought 160,000 participants, mostly lodging in Antwerp and Brussels on the same weekend, paying twice our price for the same room in the same hotel.

Yark: What were some innovations of Brussels 2014 regarding mega Hash events?

Higgins: We focused on organising a sustainable eco-friendly event. Public transport was used on a large scale. The souvenir drinking vessel was required at the venue and on trail so no waste of one-way crappy plastic cups. Trash was sorted, cans and plastic bottles recycled. All information provided was in digital form therefore no dead trees. Over the 50 days leading up to the event we even posted daily on our forum. No one could say they were not well informed. Vegetarians were given a green wristband for accessing their food queue. We also set up a Wine Club where hashers could pay a little extra for exceptionally good quality wines from around Europe. This proved a winning idea with all 400 wristbands sold. I guess the most important innovation was free beer all day Friday from 10:00 onwards.

Yark: What is your favourite beer?

Higgins: Rochefort 10 is a nice beer to wind down in the evening. One, not two!

Yark: What is next?

Higgins: Having a drink with the world. A hashing world tour is planned in early 2015. However, at the moment, I am working very hard not to organise anything. Although, I am considering having a pool bar drink for Brussels 2014 attendees at Bali 2016 Interhash with any money left over from our event.

Yark: So to all the Hashers out there, take note. Higgins could be coming to a hash near you! Buy him a beer or two (and remind him to drink more water)!

I Got A Han(g)OnOnover With Hannover H3!

30 Years Of Hashing in Hannover

by Torsten "Little Adonis" Tesch
– GM of Hannover H3

The Hannover Hash Hash House Harriers will host a party weekend on 17-19 October, celebrating "30 Years of Hannover H3" and ending the 2014 German Hashing Calendar with a blast. The theme is "Party Like It's 1984", and everybody is invited. There are only a few places left. Join the weekend and Hannover H3 promises a real han(g)OnOnover with Hannover H3!

The Hannover H3 motto of the Year 2014 is "30 years old... but still not grown up!". Their Hashing tradition started back in 1984 when founder and former GM Jürgen "Old Rock" Ruder brought the hash idea from Burmese Yagon H3 to Hannover. As one of the first hashing groups in Germany, Hannover H3 is four steps away from Mother Hash in Kuala Lumpur. During the 1990s, Hannover H3 was well connected to the military hash group of the "Bergen Hohne H3" in Bergen-Celle, next to Hannover. The two groups organized the legendary hash weekends at the "Riepenburg" in Hameln.

GERMANY

Hannover H3 members are real travellers. They have hashed in nearly 100 countries around the globe and participated at all Interhashes since 1986. They have been involved many times around the world for Haring, Beer-Meistering or other Hash- Enslavings. Germans always like to be in uniform, and Hannover hashers are very recognizable, proudly wearing their hashbadged yellow Hannover vests.

In the last 20 years, Hannover H3 hosted the German Nash Hash (GNH), one of the largest events in Europe, a record 5 times: 1991, 1995 and 2004 at the legendary Riepenburg in Hameln, 2000 at Hasenheide-Verden and 2009 in Obernkirchen. No other hash has hosted more GNHs.

Over all the years, Hannover H3 was always known for presenting good and new Hash related fun into the Hashworld. Remember the famous "Three Edges Hat" song of the 1980's or the well known drinking game "Cardinal Puff" in the 1990's? Both were a feather in the cap of Hannover's "Old Rock".

RA HOBBLEDEHOY, GM LITTLE ADONIS, ON SEC COGH*

HANNOVER H3 CIRCLE AT BRUSSELS BEER ODYSSEY 2014

Today's GM Torsten "Little Adonis" Tesch and his Hannover crew love to present their typical Hannover drinking culture called "Lüttje-Lage". At every major Hash event, e.g. Eurohash 2011 or Brussels 2014, hashers have the opportunity to experience this unique drinking technique from Hannover, where one pours a small glass of "Schnapps" into a bigger glass of "sweet brown beer", handling the two glasses with the fingers of only one hand!

The Hannover H3 crowd includes about 50 Hashers & Harriettes of all ages between 1 and 80 years old, so, they call themselves a typical "Family Hash". The running pack is approximately 20 persons and meets every second and last Sunday of the month at 10.30 am. This has brought nearly 800 runs over the last 30 years with a running distance of about 7-10 km through the surrounding countryside and forests of Hannover region. The circle is normally held in German. No worries if you cannot follow German, International Fairs in Hannover often bring a lot of visitors, so the second language is English. After the circle ceremonies, Hannover Hash always ends with a "Hash Buffet" until early afternoon.

There are a couple of hashes sprouting from Hannover H3. In 1992, Asunción H3 in Paraguay was re-founded by "Old Rock". Since 2012, "Hannover Full Moon H3" has become a sister hash to Hannover H3

COME PLAY WITH THE "COOLEST OF THE COOL" FOR BIG ISLAND DAY AND NIGHTLIFE ON THE WEEKEND OF OCTOBER 17-19 AT THE KONA COAST HASH HOUSE HARRIER 10TH ANNIVERSARY EVENT.

HAWAII

One of the joys of bringing new boots to the hash is when "I've found my people" is heard in the circle. And so it was on Saturday - a hashing day - October 23rd, 2004, Babble-On (ex Guam tyrant), Quickie (ex Long Beach, CA) and friends broke ground on the west coast of the Big Island of Hawaii with the Kona Coast Hash House Harriers. A pack of 60 odd folks came from Phoenix, SoCal, Oahu and Kona town to help bring the hash to our beautiful island, which belongs to the most isolated group of islands in the world.

Our extremely successful inaugural weekend has been followed by ten years of monthly hashes, from City of Refuge (south of Kona) to Honoka'a (north-east), to Mauna Kea volcano access road (center of the island) to Waimea (mauka/up the mountain) and all points in between. Our packs have run the gamut from 12-15 in the early days, to 50-60 in recent years, with our special runs (Red Dress Run, Xmas) having packs of 100 plus.

Babble-On founded the KCH3 with Quickie and served as the kennel's tyrant for the first three years. He helped ground our traditions, values, and operating procedures.

Uncle Buck Naked was the second tyrant for the next 6 years. Those years were marked by growth of the hash due to the efforts and the influence of hashers like Makes 'Em Cum, Rabid Gazelle, Scarf 'm Barf, I Do I Do I Do, Fire Marshal Who Bobs, Flying Toe Jamb, and Full Metal Jock.

Memorable hashes included the first Slip 'n slide hash, the annual Christmas hashes, the Kaloko Hashes, the Honokaa campout Hash, the I Do I Do I Do marriage proposal in the circle Hash, birth of the Hashit by Mad Cow, the National Park Service "Fine the Tyrant" Hash, the North Kohala Heavy Equipment Mover and Police Harassment Hash, the 3 police car hash in Waimea, many theme hashes, and the 7 police car response at Full Metal Jock's shop Hash.

Quite Nice has been the third tyrant for the past year who continues the past traditions with the help of the Mismanagement Committee and has increased technology into the hash disorganization. We expect all three tyrants to be in attendance at the Analversary Hash.

WORLD PEACE THROUGH BEER

IN OCTOBER, AROUND THE WORLD

Enjoy what the world has to offer along with Hash House Harriers kennels worldwide. Celebrated on your closest hashing day to Oct. 24, United Nations Day.

THE WEB SITE WITH INFO IS WWW.WORLDPEACETHROUGHBEER.ORG.

THERE ARE NO RULES, THOUGH THE WAY MOST RUNS ARE CONSTRUCTED IS SHORT LEGS OF TRAIL LEADING TO BEER STOPS THAT EACH REPRESENT ANOTHER COUNTRY, BASED ON THE LOCAL AVAILABILITY OF IMPORTED BEER. IN MUSIC CITY WE SERVE A 4 OUNCE CUP OF BEER (THE IMPORTS ARE EXPENSIVE) AT EACH STOP, AND HAVE ABOUT SIX STOPS PLUS BEER AT THE END. THE THEME BEER OF THE YEAR IS USUALLY SERVED AT THE END (THIS YEAR TSINGTAO, IN HONOR OF THE INTERHASH IN HAINAN).

WORLD PEACE THROUGH BEER

150 hash groups are preparing to toast their hopes that the nations of the world could get along as well as the community of the hash during the 17th annual World Peace Through Beer celebration. The Midwest Road Whores Hash House Harriers became the 146th group to be listed on the shirt design that is shared among participants in the worldwide celebration of beer, fellowship and hashing. Also new this year to WPTB were the Bulldog Boozers H3 from Songtan, Korea, the Hillbilly H3 from Virginia, the Chicago Thirstday hash, the Dhaka Mixed HHH, the Frankfurt hash, Gator Bait H3 from Louisiana, and several others, including a group from a Middle Eastern country that shall remain nameless lest the local religious authorities object.

World Peace Through Beer was started by the Music City Hash in 1997 to help the group refocus on the basics of trail and beer while enjoying a special hash event. World Peace runs are set close to United Nations Day, Oct. 24. The hash group sets off on a trail, and themed beer stops represent various countries, and beer samples from those countries are enjoyed at each stop.

A Nashville graphic designer has captured the spirit of the event each year, with a T-shirt bearing the World Peace Through Beer message in various languages. This year's language is Chinese in honor of Interhash 2014 in Hainan, China. Participating hashes are listed on the back of the shirt. In 2001, 8 groups were listed on the shirt. This year there are 146.

The Music City Hash pays the designer each year, and shares the graphics files around the world without charge. Participants could help the movement by translating the phrase "World Peace Through Beer" into languages common and obscure, and submitting them for consideration as the annual theme. Shirts have been produced in Korean, Spanish, Farsi, Welsh, Albanian, Japanese, Arabic, and Thai.

Corrigan is the founder of World Peace Through Beer.

The Orange County Hash House Harriers have been hosting this event called Betty Ford Rehab Hash out in Palm Springs California for the past 28 years. If you were not able to attend this year's event, but are interested in what transpired, here is a quick rundown of what took place.

The weekend started Friday afternoon with the ceremonial tapping of the kegs poolside, and the beer flowed freely throughout the weekend until the event wrapped up late Sunday afternoon. It's nice to arrive early Friday afternoon, have a beer and say hello to old and new friends prior to the Friday night lingerie run which is hosted by the Harriets of Orange County. I did not actually run on Friday night, probably due to the fact that I overindulged in the pre-run beer poolside followed by a few shots of Fireball, lost my phone and dignity at the run start. I was told it was a nice run which featured multiple drink checks including hash favorite bars "Hare of the Dog" and "The Tool Shed." These two bars are very hash friendly and must be visited if you're ever in Palm Springs. Following the run, hashers enjoyed pizza, more of the aforementioned beer, and a poolside DJ spinning classic tunes.

Saturday morning, a special event took place poolside as two of SoCal's favorite hashers, Deep Chocolate and Lacy Bitch Britches, tied the knot as Master of Ceremonies, Deep Throat, pronounced them Husband and Wife.

After the wedding, in what has become an annual event started by I Dream of Weenie three years ago, a pool skit at which the Harriets perform an Olympic synchronized swim routine. This year four studly male hashers joined the routine, with a hip gyrating striptease to the music "Sexy And I know It" prior to joining the Harriets in the pool for a couples synchronized swim worthy of a Gold medal!

Saturday afternoon Betty Ford and Tammy Fay introduced all past Betty Ford inducted celebrities; this year's new celebrities were Mark McGwire and Barry Bonds. Unfortunately Barry had a relapse and was unable to attend Betty Ford leaving Mark alone to bat crap into the crowd. After opening ceremonies it is pack away! This year's Saturday trail departed the hotel, zig zagging above and under the streets and through web infested tunnels of Palm Springs. There were several beer checks in the suburbs, and trail skirted the edges of a golf course oasis, eventually arriving at an outdoor soccer field where down downs were held.

In the past few years the Saturday run ended at the American Legion for Dinner and Skits, however the Legion could not accommodate the hash this year, so the pack headed to the parking lot for bus transportation to a new end. While waiting for the bus to arrive, a Phoenix hasher by the name of L Packer entertained a large number of us by spoon feeding us alcohol soaked gummy bears. I was pretty impressed that a hasher would carry such a large jar of gummy bears not knowing such a need could arise. A short bus ride, and several verses of Jesus Saves later, we arrived at another Palm Springs athletic complex which had ball fields and batting cages nicely fitting the Mark McGwire theme! A feast was served under a covered soccer field with unlimited beer and then the best part of Betty Ford - The Skits!

Having attended Betty Ford for a number of years now, I believe the talent and humor Hashers bring to the stage improves each year or maybe I am drinking more alcohol prior to the start of the skits. This year's skits started with a public service message from our liver (Heat Pump), followed by a number of other skits which had the crowd laughing. The evening ended with the world famous Hash Band playing our favorite dance tunes.

Sunday as always had a hangover run out in the desert under the unforgiving Palm Springs sun before final down downs and goodbyes were said until next year.

HASHING IN THE PHILIPPINES

Hashing in Angeles City, Philippines

by Pussy Licker/Terry Shefford
photos by Short Circuit

Regular readers of Harrier magazine will already know that the Pan Philippines Nash Hash 2015 will take place in and around Angeles City in March next year (see April 2014 issue).

For the energetic, the event kicks off on Wednesday, 18th March 2015 with a hike to the top of nearby Mount Arayat, which dominates the Angeles skyline. Events on the Thursday and Friday, 19th & 20th March, will include a ball buster, long, medium and short runs, combined circles, food, beer and more beer. Then on the morning of Saturday 21st March there will be a recovery run/walk followed by brunch and a Red Dress Run and Bar-Hop in the evening.

If you're not all hashed out by then you can go on to do the ACH3 hash run on the Sunday and Subic Bay hash run on the Monday. Still got some energy left? Then there's a Hash Bash event the following weekend in Puerto Galera.

So what are you waiting for? Why not join the 100 or so hashers that have already signed up and register now. To do so just go to the ACH3 website here:

<http://angeles-hash.com/> & click on the 2015 PAN PHILIPPINES NASH HASH banner. There you'll find all of the information you need both about the event itself and how to register on line. We look forward to hearing from you.

PHILIPPINE HASH CLUBS

The Philippine Islands are home to a number of Hash clubs, with the main ones being located in Manila, Angeles City (A.C.), La Union and Puerto Galera. The first three are all on the largest and northern most Philippine island of Luzon and the last on the island of Mindoro. While all of these clubs have existed for many years and each has a loyal and regular following, Angeles City Hash (ACH3) is by far the largest with an average weekly attendance of more than 100 hashers. It is also one of the oldest, having celebrated its 36th anniversary in August this year.

ANGELES CITY HASH

Origins

Angeles City is located nearby the former home of Clark Air Force Base and the ACH3 club was first formed in August 1978 with a mix of US military personnel plus American, Aussie and British expats, mostly male. Runs were mainly done around town but occasionally also on the Base. A typical pack in the early days was about 20-35 hashers. Following a tightening of security on the Base ACH3 evolved into two groups, military personnel on Base and non-military personnel around town.

Mount Pinatubo

The eruption of nearby Mount Pinatubo in June 1991 was the second-largest volcanic eruption of the 20th century and completely devastated Angeles City and the surrounding areas. It ultimately led to the closure of Clark Air Force Base and the relocation of the GI's. But despite the devastation and in true Hash fashion ACH3 still continued to run every week, even though on more than one occasion there were only three or four of them.

Present Day

Today Angeles City is a major S-E Asia tourist destination with its own international airport (Clark International), legendary night life with more than a hundred night clubs / girly bars / discos, live music venues and a huge range of hotel accommodation.

ACH3 has also progressed and is today a very successful hash club averaging more than 100 hashers every Sunday and often hitting 140+ during the peak season (November-April). About half of these are female Filipinos. The close proximity of the magnificent Zambales mountain range and expansive rain forests provides hares with plenty of scope for setting any kind of run from the toughest ball-buster to a leisurely ramble.

Associated Groups

As ACH3 has continued to grow and evolve over the years the needs of the pack have diverged, some requiring more challenging runs while others are satisfied with a modest 6 or 7 km. This has led to the formation of other hash groups within A.C. the most common being the BEACH (British Empire and American Colonies Hash), the Bush Ranger and the Full Moon. All are once-a-month and the BEACH and Bush Ranger are men-only hashes.

There are also three hiking groups, the Arayat, the Sundowner and the Ramble in descending order of difficulty, which meet on alternate weeks. Details of all the foregoing activities can be found on the ACH3 website here:

HASHERS STRANDED OVERNIGHT ON MOUNTAINTOP A GUAMAZING TRUE TRAIL ADVENTURE

So, there we were, eighteen hashers stuck on the upper slope of a mountain, well past dark, unable to scale the steep and slippery slope back to the top, incapable of climbing down the sheer cliff face leading to the bottom, shivering in the frigid rain, huddling tightly together to stay warm, clinging to roots and clumps of sword grass to keep from sliding to our doom, dehydrated and out of water, waiting to be rescued, and wondering whatever became of the poor bastard who fell over the cliff a few hours ago.

According to the ones who said they had actually heard him, he might have landed in a tree and broken his leg, after which he had politely let them know that he was still alive by repeatedly screaming for help. They said he had been screaming off and on for about an hour, after which he had gone ominously silent. None of us could be certain whether he had died or if he was simply sulking because none of us had woven a sword-grass parachute, leapt off the cliff into the abyss, landed gracefully in his tree, and rendered first aid. We did know a few things for certain though. We knew that Guam Fire Rescue was on the way, unless they were still looking for us on the wrong mountain. We knew that more of us should have brought water and flashlights, despite the assurances some hashers had received earlier in the day that they probably wouldn't really need these things. And, we knew with a deep and unanimous certainty that once we got off this goddamn mountain we would find those responsible for our predicament, form a line, and take turns punching them in the face. It had started off as such a nice day too. How had this happened? When and where had everything gone so horribly wrong?

So, there I was, seven hours earlier, a visiting hasher from Okinawa, excited by the prospect of a glorious afternoon of hashing in the Guamanian sunshine on a truly gorgeous day. As I paid the hash cash, she advised me that today's trail might be a little arduous, and I would need gloves to protect my hands from the sword grass. No worries. I was ready! After all, I had been hashing for 20 years all over the globe and survived many challenging runs. I had been on Okinawa trails that were mostly river where you couldn't touch bottom. I had done the infamous 222 km Coast-to-Coliseum Hash marathon from one side of Italy to the other, twice! I had run with the Mother Hash through the jungles of Malaysia where the plants have razor sharp spines that can slice a man in two (or at least pierce his nipples if he isn't careful). I had hashed the canals of Venice, the sewers of Oklahoma City, and the swamps of Florida. I had even been hashing in Guam before, so I knew what their trails were like and what I was getting into. "Bring it on, Agana H3." I thought, "Do your worst!" Little did I know how soon I would be regretting such thoughts, for it is unwise to so tempt the Hash Gods.

As we started trail around 5pm, everything seemed perfect. Spirits were high, the trail through the jungle was well marked, the terrain was somewhat challenging, the weather was perfect, and the scenery was gorgeous (hooray for harriettes in lycra shorts)! After a while, we descended into a ravine and began making our way up a small riverbed, climbing over boulders, wading through waist-deep waters, and even climbing up a waterfall on a rope. It was a great trail! Then, we hit the uphill portion.

First, we hiked up out of the ravine to a low ridgeline, and then we followed that ridgeline up, up, up, and then further up. As we continued forward, the slope on either side became steeper and steeper, the trail grew narrower and narrower, the sword grass grew thicker and thicker, and sun sank lower and lower behind the mountains. Up and up we went, sometimes losing our footing on the slippery mud between the enormous clumps of sword grass that we were forced to use as handholds. Soon, those of us with flashlights started using them to guide the pack up the side of what we now realized was a bona fide mountain. We could see the flashlights of the front running bastards far up ahead, near the peak, which many of us assumed must be near the end of the trail. Hah! How foolish and naive we were! Little did we realize that the peak merely marked the halfway point of this long and grueling trail with no beer stops or beverage checks of any kind.

But, we were in luck! Standing astride the mountain's peak, like some ancient god of wisdom, there was a veteran local hasher waiting with the gift of his sage advice. "Heed my words, hashers!" he said, radiating authority, "From the peak, the true trail turns left and goes along that other ridgeline. But, it's starting to get dark, and that path is fraught with much peril! Instead, follow this ridgeline straight ahead, up over the next rise, and then just keep on going. It's a much quicker, safer, and easier way down. You won't get lost. Just follow the muddy track left by those who've gone before you." As a visiting hasher, I had no idea who this spirit guide was or whether he could be trusted, but the pack knew him well, respected his advice, and assured me that no one knew these mountains better than he. So, I had a choice. I could turn left, venture forth on my own as the last hasher on true trail, and risk getting lost or injured in the darkness with no fellow hashers to come to my aid. Or, I could go straight, stay with everyone else, trust their wisdom, and enjoy the camaraderie of the pack on a pleasant hike down the mountain.

At this point in the story, I should point out a few basic facts.

Fact 1: The instructions the veteran local hasher provided were, in fact, the perfect advice for getting down from the peak of Mount Schroeder quickly, easily, and safely. Fact 2: We were not, in fact, on Mount Schroeder. Fact 3: We were, in fact, on the peak of Mount Finansanta, just to the south of Mount Schroeder, but in the dim twilight the veteran local hasher had become confused. Fact 4: A little voice inside my head told me at this critical moment, "No! Stay on true trail, and then you can at least be 100% certain that you won't get lost!" Fact 5: Hindsight is a bitch, man.

All the local hashers surrounding me chose to heed the veteran's sage advice. The pack deviated off the true trail, and they continued straight along the ridge line. I told the little voice in my head that it made sense to stay with the pack, so as not to risk following the true trail all by myself in the dark. After all, I might end up in physical distress, or lost, or worse! The little voice nodded it's imaginary little head in agreement with this irrefutable logic, and off I went with the rest of the pack, not realizing that very soon I'd soon be in physical distress, lost, and worse.

Getting to the top of the next rise was easier said than done. The climb was even steeper than the one we had just completed, but we hauled ourselves up the muddy path one fistful of sword grass at a time. It was indeed getting dark, but at the top we did actually see the track left by the hashers who had gone before us. So far, so good! As we continued forward along the ridgeline though, things soon no longer seemed quite so certain. The trail in front of us began to slope downward at a steeper and steeper angle, giving us cause for concern. The tracks of those who had gone before us veered off to the left and down a somewhat less treacherous looking slope. We turned too, thinking this was the path that would lead us off the mountain and safely to the bottom of the ravine. We had to slide on our butts through some steep bits, maneuvering around, under, and between the now gigantic sword grass plants. Down we went, making slow but steady progress as the stars began to twinkle in the moonless sky. Then, we hit the trees. Oh lord.... the trees.

These weren't normal trees. These were bloody bastard trees. They were small, stubby, gnarled, and twisted. These trees were angry at the world for making them cling to life on this awful mountainside, and they focused all of that anger on us. They grew just far enough apart to make it tricky to get from one to the next, but they were just close enough together to make it difficult to get through them or to see very far ahead. The group I was with at this point numbered about one dozen hashers with about five flashlights among us, strung out along a line in the darkness, slowly and carefully climbing down the very steep slope, hanging on to the trees for dear life. There was no longer any muddy track of footprints to follow. We were now forging our own path and simply trying to find a way down, and we could hear other groups out in the darkness doing the same.

After descending through the hateful trees for a while, we were all getting quite tired and frustrated. One girl lost her grip on a branch, went tumbling, and nearly disappeared into the darkness below. Fortunately, another hasher quite literally caught her by the breast (lucky bastard), slowing her tumble just enough that she managed to grab ahold of a tree root. Hooray for the lifesaving power of boobs! Every now and then, someone would accidentally dislodge one of the large rocks loosely clinging to the mountainside, causing it to careen downhill at deadly speed towards the front of the pack. Somehow everyone managed to avoid being struck directly by any of these deadly missiles. Suddenly, the scouts breaking trail at the front called for everyone to stop. They moved back and forth for a bit, confirming their fears. They were so far down below me that I could only hear them but not see them. Finally, they shouted back with the bad news. "Shit... it's a cliff." they said, "It's a very big fucking cliff. We can't even see the bottom. We have no choice but to turn back."

At this point, I was no longer sure if I had the energy or the stamina required to turn back. Climbing up those hills earlier had been murder. Climbing down through these trees had been at least an accessory to murder. Climbing back up the rugged hillside of trees, then up through all that mud and monstrous sword grass, and getting back to the top again? That sounded like a plan for mass homicide. There truly was no other option though. We turned around to find a path back up to the ridgeline with the intention of locating the true trail and then making our way down the mountain as the hares had originally intended. It was slow and painful going getting back up the hill. We were no longer running. We were no longer walking. We weren't even hiking. We were literally crawling, mountain climbing in fact, hand over hand, in the dark, without a map, guided only by a few flashlights and a general idea of where we needed to go. The lightning in the distance that seemed to be getting closer wasn't really much help. As I exited the trees and looked up at the silhouette of the mountain looming over us, I felt woozy, and I realized that there was another problem. My mouth had suddenly become dry as cotton, I had stopped sweating, and I was not feeling well at all.

Before the hash, I had downed a large bottle of water, but apparently I had sweat every drop of it out of me at this point. I asked the hasher behind me if she had any water left in her camelback. She had a bit, and she allowed me to take a few precious sips. We slogged onwards, one fistful of grass at a time, crawling up the hillside. About halfway up towards the ridgeline, we paused in a large field of sword grass where the angle of the slope lessened just enough to make it possible to sit or lie down without immediately sliding. We stopped here for a break and to let the others catch up. My guardian angel offered me a few more sips from her camelback, which I gratefully accepted. I smiled, I thanked her kindly, and then I promptly rolled over and puked my guts out. Oh... hello, heat exhaustion. Welcome to the party.

I wasn't the only one who was doing poorly. Everyone was dehydrated, and several others in our group were complaining about headaches, nausea, and feeling shaky. We decided to let a few of the more fit individuals scout for the best way back up to the top while the majority of us took a short rest. We could hear other hashers spread out across the same mountain slope, and we called to them to come join us. Slowly, more and more exhausted mountaineers emerged from the darkness to join our makeshift camp. Our scouts soon called back to us with bad news. The hillside above us was so steep that there was no easy way to climb back to the top. They continued searching as the rest of us debated what to do. One impatient group of about half a dozen decided they had the energy to try to reach the top, and so they disappeared into the night to give it a go, never to be seen by us again. (We later found out that they eventually found a spot where they could just barely manage the climb, after which they found true trail again.) The majority of us remained behind, discussing our options.

A short while later, we were rejoined by some of our scouts with even more bad news. Someone had fallen over the cliff in the darkness and was calling for help. They thought that he had landed in a tree, he was apparently injured, and perhaps he had broken a leg. That clinched it. We quickly figured out who had phones. One person called a hasher who was already at the end of the trail to tell them our predicament, and another dialed 911. The emergency dispatcher greeted her cheerfully, "Hafa adai! What is the nature of your emergency?" Oh yes, this was going to go just swimmingly.

We listened as my guardian angel (a nurse, as it turns out) described our situation to the dispatcher, telling her about the individuals with heat exhaustion, the fact that we were all dehydrated, and most especially about our friend being eaten alive by the Whomping Willow. We told the dispatcher our GPS coordinates, which we had obtained from one of the phones. This then gave us the unique opportunity to patiently attempt to educate our emergency dispatcher on the difference between lat/long coordinates in minutes, degrees, and seconds (which we had) versus coordinates in minutes and decimal minutes (which we did not have). She didn't really get it, but she promised that she was typing everything up verbatim and passing it directly to Guam Fire Rescue. Then, she told us to stay put and that she would call us back with more information very soon. While we waited, we took a head count... eighteen. Eighteen of us were now at the mercy of the world's cheeriest Chamorro emergency dispatcher.

The minutes ticked by, the lightning grew even closer, and then the rain started. The cold rain felt nice at first, as it removed the "heat" from my "heat exhaustion", leaving simply "exhaustion". As the drizzle continued though, everyone began to get the chills. I was a bit warmer than the handful of hashers who hadn't even worn shirts that day, a decision that they now had come to regret. We all agreed that the word "shirts" should be added to our mental chalkboard where we had already written down "water", "food", "flashlights", "rope", and "beer" under the heading of "Things We Really Fucking Wish We Had More Of Right About Now". Soon we were all shivering, and so we started huddling together to conserve body heat, as some of us who were military had been taught to do in such situations. This trick really does work, by the way. It's great for warding off both hypothermia and homophobia, because in a situation like this you really don't give a damn whose genitals are poking your backside just so long as they are warm. (Side note: "Joe" has a wonderfully warm backside.)

INDIA

Pan Asia Hash

Pondicherry, India. 25th - 27th Sept 2015

First and foremost I would like to thank you for choosing Pondicherry, India as your next venue for Pan Asia Hash from 25th to 27th September 2015. We have a dynamic committee who have been working for the past two years and have already done most of the ground work for you hashers. We assure you that you will be pleasantly surprised in Pondicherry come 2015.

We have analysed the shortcomings of Pan Asia Hash 2014 in Pattaya, and vow to do our best to avoid a such a debacle in Pondy. My committee and I have been constantly having meetings to make our Pan Asia Pondi 2015 as exciting as possible for all you hashers.

Hashing should be fun and enjoyable. There should be good run trails and an abundance of the golden brew to quench your thirst. My committee will be there to provide and strive to achieve the best to meet your expectations. We will emulate previous events that brought sweet memories and fostered good fellowship.

It's time for a change!
Enjoy the Pan-Asian Hash
in a new country!
With new landscapes!
New runs! New cuisine!
More FUN!!

That's Hashing!

Puerto Galera, Philippines

Hashing in the Philippines this March 2015

Angeles City will host Pan Philippine Nash Hash 18-22 March in the most hash friendly terrain on the planet. If the foothills of Pinatubo don't do you in, the bars of Balibago will certainly finish you off.

After the City of the Fallen Angels, jump on a bus to Port Batangas where you can board a boat to Sebang Beach, where Wild Wolf will host PI Hash Bash 26-29 March in Puerto Galera. This diver's paradise is arguably the most scenic of all hash hubs in the Philippine archipelago.

If two short weeks don't quite fill your Philippine fix, set your sights on Subic Bay and Angeles City 14-17 March for Bimbo's 69th Birthday Bash.

The Department of Tourism says "It's more fun in the Philippines"... Fact or fiction, hype or hyperbole? You can be the judge.

The Hash Darwin Awards

Old Chaz, the chap on the right, in one of his sober moments, put forward the notion of “survival of the fittest”, a concept that implies that the removal from the gene pool (usually by death) of its weaker members, thereby strengthens the survival chances of the remainder. However, here at OTI, we do not encourage the extermination of the less able, the feeble, or the intellectually challenged. Rather, we encourage them to become hashers! Further, this column aims to be a forum where the moronic misdeeds of hashers might be chronicled in pursuit of that noblest of pastimes, namely, having cheap laughs at other people’s expense. With that in mind, I offer the following:

GET IT DOWN; AVOID THE BROWN

Charles Darwin

The rather weak bit of versifying that forms the title to this installment of OTI is not intended merely as a display of my considerable poetic talents (“There was a young lad from Nantucket” etc.) but rather as an easy way for you, gentle reader, to remember the important information you are about to learn.

As usual, I have tirelessly and thanklessly spent at least 15 minutes googling crap on the Internet in order to bring you the latest life-improving findings from the world of scientific research into areas of interest to the thinking hasher (if that’s not an oxymoron).

Thus it is that I turn in this column to the perennial topic of drink. Most, I daresay all, hashmen have been subjected to lectures ranging from the wheedling to the hectoring from wives, girlfriends, doctors, and other “concerned” types about how much piss they drink. Well, good news is at hand. While many nanny-state societies suggest a man ought to limit himself to 3-4 drinks a day (which would have got Churchill and does get some hashmen I know to around morning tea time), a former World Health Organization alcohol expert named Dr. Kari Poikolainen has analyzed decades of research into the effects of alcohol on the human body and come up with a far more reasonable number. Dr. Poikolainen (who is a Finn, which suggests he knows something about drinking) concludes that drinking is only harmful when you consume more than 13 units a day. To put that into perspective, that’s about six large bottles of Beerlao (or whatever beer you are forced to consume if it is not available where you live) or more than a bottle of wine - which typically contains around 10 units – a day. Moreover, he suggested consumption at this moderate (note that lovely word here) level brought greater health benefits than abstaining. Now these are quantities and results I can live with.

Even better, it seems that drinking that amount of piss every day not only doesn't hurt you, it makes you more popular. A new study notes men and women who engage in heavy drinking more frequently hold higher positions of power within their friend groups. The study - focused on 357 young adults headed to bars in Ontario over two months - tracked both the number and frequency of drinks consumed. What researchers discovered was that consuming a hefty number of drinks in one sitting, combined with more occasions of heavy drinking over the past year, indicated a higher peer group status for both sexes, though the finding was more pronounced in men.

That's right, in results likely to surprise absolutely no-one, people (particularly blokes) who get on the piss heavily and often are the leaders in their social groups. Think about any hash worthy of the name. I rest my case.

Interestingly, the study suggested that the positive influence gained by drinking peaked at about 13 drinks in one session, after which the drinkers' influence declined (presumably along with their ability to speak clearly and to not piss on their own shoes in the urinal). See that magic number again? Getting half a slab of beer or a bottle of red (white if you must) down your neck every day makes you healthier and more popular than the weedy abstemious arse-clown in the corner of the bar sipping meekly on a soda water and talking to no-one. Hell, throw in a run once or twice a week and becomes clear why hashers form some sort of master race. So seats on the ice now and always for the mincing, hand-wringing, two glasses of piss a day, got to look after their health wankers.

Some may fear, though, that all this physical and social triumph may come at a price, namely an occasional, or possibly daily, hangover. Now, on one level I would suggest that there is a purpose to hangovers. They act as a reminder that yesterday was a good day and spur us on to start drinking again today. After all, if you didn't have a hangover, you might be tempted to do some work, go shopping, mow the lawn, or to engage in some other dreary activity rather than open the liquor cabinet and ponder whether it's to be the Irish coffee or the Bloody Mary to start the day. Here too, research comes in handy. A review of hangover studies conducted by the BBC (of all places) showed that there was no evidence to suggest that mixing one's drinks, i.e., drinking beer, wine, and spirits at the same sitting, made hangovers any worse than just sticking to one type of alcohol. However, not all alcohols are created equal when it comes to hangovers. Things known as congeners, which are the non-ethanol products of the fermentation process, are known to contribute to hangovers and they occur in greater quantities in darker alcohol. Some bourbons, for example, contain 37 times as many congeners as white spirits. (People who know me will see where I'm going with this). Our magic number of 13 units of alcohol equates to about half a standard bottle of spirits. Thus if you seek to reach your peak levels of health, vitality, and sparkling social presence through the wonderful world of spirits, avoid the brown ones and stick with the clear ones, especially the ones that come in beautiful blue bottles. The only problem for me is that, if I were to confine myself to half a bottle of Bombay Sapphire a day, I would have to stay in bed until about two in the afternoon.

No comment.

In any event, tear out this column and carry it around with you to wave in the face of any temperance types you run across (unlikely on many hashes but you never know). The next OTI column should be out in three months. That means you (and I) need to get through about 90 bottles of wine, 45 cases of beer, or three and a half crates of gin before then. Get to it!

On On.

SOMEHOW YOU JUST ALWAYS KNEW IT WAS OUT THERE SOMEWHERE

I'VE BEEN UP IT MANY TIMES AND USUALLY WITHOUT A PADDI CONTENTS

Graphic Message to ISIS from Middle Eastern Feminists. Would there be any clearer way to communicate your disgust for a certain group, than by defecating and menstruating on their beloved symbol while giving them the middle finger? So far, I think this photo wins the prize for clarity.

An Egyptian feminist and blogger is taking to social media to protest the strict nature of Islam and, according to her, a society which promotes violence, racism, sexism, harassment and hypocrisy.

Aliaa Magda Elmahdy, 23, and a veiled woman is seen in this picture pooping and bleeding on a black ISIS flag. Although Elmahdy did not explain why she took this particular photo, she takes a strong stance against Islamic and Sharia Laws.

The Arab nations apparently did not print the photo because on the flag is written "there is no God but Allah."

After ISIS slaughtered their way across major cities in the Middle East and have taken control of 1/3 Iraq, women there have become the target of their increasingly strict rules. The jihadists mandated that women cannot leave the house without a male relative, must wear full veils, and in the northern city of Mosul, all women and girls are being forced to undergo female genital mutilation.

Secularist Sayyed el-Qimni, an opponent of Islamic fundamentalism that supports separation of religion and state, said: "This hurts the entire secular current in front of those calling themselves the people of virtue. It is a double disaster. Because I am liberal and I believe in the right of personal freedom, I can't interfere."

We commend these women for their bravery. If you look past the vulgarity, this is probably one of the worst insults that can be given in the Muslim world. Try to appreciate the courage and the message because these woman obviously have more guts than most men in the Middle East by standing up to ISIS like this, knowing there will be a huge target on their heads. Although the way they chose to get their message out might seem a little extreme and even immoral, risking their lives in order to speak out against a sick religion that promotes such horrendous treatment towards women is in our opinion, heroic.

GREAT MOMENTS IN SIGN WRITING

Never put the 'f' where the door is. Don't think mr. Salmond had this in mind for his ad campaign.

COULDN'T MAKE IT UP COULD YOU? BRILLIANT!

---non---

It's probably not the image Pendennis Shipyard had in mind when it had its company logo printed on the side of two vans - the word 'Penis' spelled out in large letters.

The Falmouth-based firm recently had the company name painted on the side of its two Ford Transit Connect vehicles. But what the company failed to realise was that four letters were obscured when the side doors were slid open - leaving the offending word.

---non---

SPACING IS VERY IMPORTANT

It's remarkable just how often companies fail to look at the result properly when they commission new signs.

Earlier this year, indeed, there was a similar case just down the road in Truro, when a pub wanted to make sure customers still turned up for a pint while the street was closed for water works.

Unfortunately, as can be seen in the picture, the creator of the sign did not leave sufficient space between the words 'pen' and 'is'.

THE LATEST ON DOGGIE DAVE

One killer is in custody, the other on the run but his name is known.

The chap on the run, Polan Padilla, was working at Doggie Dave's house all week. He came back with another guy Pamintuan (the one in custody) who was allegedly a drug dealer and who was arrested in a drug 'buy bust' by the police. How they knew who he was and that he was a drug dealer, we have no idea.

It would seem that Padilla must have owed the drug guy some money and told him 'I know an old bugger we can knock over'. They went there at 5pm still daylight. It would seem that Padilla used his claw hammer to break some pop rivets on the gate, then to put his hand in to turn the lock, presumably entering the house to surprise DD.

As Padilla knew that DD knew him, he obviously either hoped he could surprise DD and disable him, or he went there knowing that he would kill him.

Looking at the scene in the house, we think DD put up a fight. His neighbour heard him calling 'help' for ten minutes and he called the police. He was looking out of his own door when the villains exited DD's gate and got on a trike. The neighbour took the plate number. It was later found abandoned. He and other neighbours all got a good look at the guys. Let's hope they soon catch the other bastard and justice will prevail.

THE FOOTBALLING WORLD!!

For those who do not listen to the 'Today' programme on BBC Radio 4, this is English humour at its best.

Right at the end of a programme recently, there was a discussion about the obscene cost of entry into Premiership football matches where the cheapest price of £60 to £100 per game is not uncommon.

An elderly chap being interviewed said he could recall many years ago arriving at the turnstiles when the attendant greeted him with "That will be ten quid, mate".

"What?!" the old chap said "I could get a woman for that!"

Without batting an eyelid, the fellow on the turnstile retorted,

"Not for 45 minutes each way with a brass band and a meat pie in the interval, you wouldn't!"

THE GUNFIGHTER

A young cowboy sitting in a saloon one Saturday night recognized an elderly man standing at the bar who, in his day, had been the fastest gun in the West.

The cowboy took a place next to the old-timer, bought him a drink and told him of his great ambition to be a great shot...

'Could you give me some tips?' he asked.

The old man said, 'Well, for one thing, you're wearing your gun too high - tie the holster a little lower down on your leg.'

'Will that make me a better gunfighter?'

'Sure will.'

The young man did as he was told, stood up, whipped out his .44 and shot the bow tie off the piano player.

'That's terrific!' said the cowboy. 'Got any more tips?'

'Yep,' said the old man. 'Cut a notch out of your holster where the hammer hits it - that'll give you a smoother draw' 'Will that make me a better gunfighter?' he asked.

'You bet it will,' said the old-timer.

The young man took out his knife, cut the notch, stood up, drew his gun in a blur, and then shot a cufflink off the piano player.

'Wow!' exclaimed the cowboy 'I'm learnin' somethin' here. Got any more tips?'

The old man pointed to a large can in a corner of the saloon. 'See that axle grease over there? Coat your gun with it.'

The young man smeared some of the grease on the barrel of his gun.

'No,' said the old-timer, 'I mean smear it all over the gun, handle and all.'

'Will that make me a better gunfighter?' he asked.

'No,' said the old-timer, 'but when Wyatt Earp gets done playing the piano, he's gonna shove that gun up your ass, and it won't hurt as much.'

THE GREEK LEGAL SYSTEM!!

A man and his wife were getting a divorce at a local court in Greece; but the custody of their children posed a problem.

The mother jumped to her feet and protested to the judge that since she had brought the children into this world, she should retain custody of them.

The man also wanted custody of his children, so the judge asked for his side of the story.

After a long moment of silence, the man rose from his chair and replied:

"Your Honor, when I put a coin into a vending machine, and a Coke comes out, does the Coke belong to me or to the machine?"

ChiHash Run # 486 @ Havant Thicket
13th October 2002 Graham 'Old Faithful' and Pru

After the brothers MaliBog and Dragon Lady's very first run with the Chichester Hash in the pissing rain just over 12 years ago, MaliBog D'Vice returns to Havent Thicket, this time in the blazing sun of a hot September day.

BUT FIRST A BLAST FROM THE PAST

It had to happen... Rain and autumn and shiggy - such is hashing, especially in this area. For once a goodly sized bunch of the usual suspects lined up to hear Old Faithful proclaim that the JM's were both unavailable - Invisible running from Winchester to somewhere and Splasher checking out postcodes in Cornwall. Newcomers were in evidence with young Kimberley (aged 10 and already approaching 2 metres in height) bring father and dog along. They had the misfortune to move in next to Hash Flash and the result was obvious. Three experienced hashers turned up in a 40 year old Volvo and introduced themselves as Malibog, Malibog aka Kalbo and the Dragon Lady. They were from Sweden or the Philippines or Australia or all three.

So without much ado we were off following the trail through the Thicket until the first check. The three newcomers were enquiring as to local rules (rules?) as the check sneaked us behind the trail and into the woods.

Another check and Spiderman was way in front splashing through puddles convinced he was on the right scent. Another check and this time it was Bambi who was leaping ahead dragging the pack on at a fair speed. It is a point to note that as we appeared to be moving along with alacrity Miriam and the Doc always seemed to up with frontrunners proving that hashing experience beats fitness and effort every time (at least that is my story and I'm sticking to it).

The rain held off with just a drizzle keeping us cool but enough for Carolina (from Brazil) and the Eskimo (from Hungary) to complain about the cold and check how many layers each other was wearing. Carolina especially complaining that the Can Man had forced her to run...

A regroup was in order as the pack began to spread out but after a quick head count we were off into the deepest wooded area, whilst Malibog explained to me that in Sweden they put a colouring dye into the flour to show up in the snow. Not too much snow here but the thought of multi-coloured spots attracts me somehow.....

Malibog Kalbo received the Hashit for wingeing about crossing a stream.

Not sure if the dog was about to give him an award.

It seemed that we twisted and turned through the wood only to arrive back at the spot we entered. Bambi mentioned that the false was that way so it must be this...

but where were the rest of the pack. It turns out Rasta had given certain members a short cut. So up the hill and we bumped into Whispers, Vicki and some newcomers who had turned up late with stories of closed motorways etc.

Pretty feeble but we let them join in. So a few more twists and turns and then there was no fooling the pack as they could smell the chariots.

So we came in by dribs and drabs and began to get ready to award the hashit only to find that Treefeller the Can Man were missing. Can Man finally came out of the undergrowth carrying lots of tins.

So after a few nominations Malibog aka Kalbo was awarded the hashit for complaining about crossing a stream. Complain!!! The Splasher would have paid good money to cross such a river.

This coming from a Hasher who had laid a trail during the eruption of Mt Pinatubo and a typhoon, at the same time.

I would have given it to the Panda who never seems to get untidy or muddy whatever the conditions underfoot, but no such luck.

At the circle a warning was given that the next night hash would be AT NIGHT and therefore members must bring a torch - Thank You Mr. Maisey, master of the obvious, we do understand and then on to the Harvester for drinky poos. A nice wet hash with new members and mud. What more can you ask for?

On On!Humble Scribe

BACK TO THE FUTURE

ChiHash Run # 797 @ Havant Thicket - 14th September 2014 'Popeye & Olive Oil'

Ring ring on Treefeller's phone, "Were going to be late" from Dr Blood, "and we have two newbies and a dog in tow". So the JM's decided that we had better wait for them in the pleasant sunshine and fresh north easterly breeze. Fifteen minutes of small talk and listening to Malibog later, ring ring, "we are really late, go ahead, we will catch you up", and that is what we did. We did not rush out though, we slowly transitioned from a standstill through a walk to a slow trot northwest parallel to Manor Lodge Rd.

Old Faithful was the only one actually running and he found two falsies before the rest arrived at the first check. It took a little while before the true trail was found continuing northwest through dense low overhanging vegetation that gives this area its name.

After the ducking, dodging and weaving of prickly stingy bits we emerged on the track to Horsefoot Hill and spied Olive Oil standing at the top of the rise on the next check.

The pack had a good natter here while Bika, Old Faithful and Malibog explored the possibilities, with the latter choosing the right way, west towards Blendworth Common. We toured the edge of the common before turning east through that bit that's always boggy, the Snake Charmer proved to be the FRB here hitting on the right trail and Splasher was suddenly close behind, either he took a massive short cut or he found a hole in the space time continuum and stepped through.

He was not so forward when we reached the muddy brown water of Upper Lake, for a regroup and a photo. It was suggested by Malibog that this could be an impromptu swim stop but nobody took up the offer, where has the sense of adventure and stupidity gone?

Heading southeast from here, along The Avenue, we encountered some ripe blackberries that slowed us before emerging from the trees and heading east on Gipsies Plain. At last we were caught by Pink Flamingo, Dr Blood and newcomers Geetika, Akshay and their canine companion.

After a pause for introductions, we continued east, with a fish hook to relieve the boredom until we almost reached Staunton Way and realised that the northwest track would quickly take us back to the chariots, and it was nicely floured to boot.

We were just winding down from our usual fast sprint to a slower jog and within sight of the chariots when we found a load of false trail marks in all homeward directions. Is this legal? Oh yes, I forgot rule one, that says "There are no rules".

West then, and into Furzy Plain where Snake Charmer attracted a slithering fast Slow Worm that had been sun bathing on the warm path.

Shortly we were making a broad U turn in the trees and heading home for real this time after one hour and fifteen minutes of flat dry hashing.

At the circle the hares thanked themselves for a great hash, and we mentioned the late arrivals and the two who ignored the fish hook (Splasher and?). Thom was awarded the seat with a hole on account of some act of disrespect to the hares, after all you must keep rebellious teenagers in their place.

In no time at all the pack retired to The Staunton Arms, the same old Harvester from 12 years ago, where the prices are still reasonable and the service refreshingly swift and the beers refreshingly cool.....On - On! Bambi.

AcH3 Run # 1876

Angeles City Hash House Harriers Re-Visited

It was to be our last run in Angeles City for this year as left Margarita and headed out onto the old USAF Clark base for the AcH3 1876th run...

For once reverting back to old days the hare, Soggy by name if not by nature gave us a live trail with a 15 min start. As this was Filipino time we were left hanging around the start keeping the jeepnies company for some time till eventually the hare arrived with the good news there was to be a runners and a walkers trail with the runners doing a series of loops following the walkers trail with the idea nobody would get lost. Wishful thinking but seemed a good idea at the time.

The trail consisted of a scenic circle route passing by some of the old derelict airman's billets, what was left of the old officers bungalows, ruined after Pinatubo, and the somewhat overgrown parade ground and the famous Japanese WW2 hill where there are still remnants of the tunnels they built eventually arriving back at the park after over an hour in the heat and humidity of the day. After waiting for the lost hashers the circle was opened where Saput was given the holy shit award, others for wearing old AcH3 shirts and a whole line of departing Hashers.

Après Hash was back at the Margarita Station where the rest of the evening was spent emptying the various bottles of San Miguel beers. Unfortunately it had to end so we said farewell to AcH3 for this time but vowed not to wait another 15 years for our next visit.....OnOnMaliBog

On The Cover: MAD "LITTLE BOY" Edwards first ran with the Ashbourne Hash in 1960 (original Circular Hash) (1922 original) (Ashbourne) and didn't run again for 15 years. He had been a regular Phoenix Hash runner. Phoenix Hash (like hasher), and the GM of the PHH Full Moon Hash over the last 8 years. He is often found breaking bridges and soccer goals, providing amusement to laughing and smiling village school homes, were just not through, and singing full volume off key in the circle.
